Going Nowhere – An Elaboration on the Role of the Father:
The Preoedipal Father as a Crucial Component in Personality Integration

April 2nd
11:30 a.m. – 1 p.m.
Sunday

PRESENTER: Hanna Turken, LCSW, BCD, LPsyA

This presentation aims to convey the importance of the process of attachment, but most of all to underline the process of separation from the preoedipal father. Clinical cases emphasizing transference enactments and resolutions will support the analyst's theoretical stance. Patients with these developmental issues feel that they are missing an “it” -- are stuck, going nowhere. It is the therapist, who knows what “it” is, the one who will give the missing piece to them. Through the therapeutic process, patients are able to arrive at a more realistic assessment of themselves and others, a consolidation of ego

Hanna Turken – Past board member of the Queens Chapter. Continuing Education Committee and Senior Member, NPAP. Research Associate the Psycho-history Forum, Published author and presenter of clinical papers on topics of culture, sexuality, female development, fathers, trauma, and psycho-history. Bilingual (Spanish) private practice in Queens and Manhattan.

LEARNING OBJECTIVES – After attending the presentation, participants will be able to

- Identify the role of the preoedipal father in the child’s attachment and separation process of development.
- Describe the transference that leads to the person’s personality integration.
